MODERN LEARNING DESIGNED FOR TODAY’S PROJECT WORLD

In the past, 90% of work was operationally focused, technical, and siloed, but technological advances and globalization are transforming how work gets done today into a more network-oriented, collaborative, and project-based experience.

Bridging the Skills Gap
This shift is challenging organizations to rethink the skills employees need to be effective at work as well as how best to build those skills and behaviors.

Learning is a Journey, Not an Event
Learning no longer happens on a linear path. Your employees need and want more than one-and-done training sessions that usually don’t fit into their daily work.

A Holistic Approach for Maximum Results
To address the changing needs of our customers and your learners, Strategy Execution has developed expertly designed eLearning journeys aligned to the four domains that drive project-based work: Strategy, Work, People, and Self.

61% of senior executives admit their firms struggle to bridge the gap between strategy and execution.1

70% of organizations agree that team collaboration is critical to successfully planning and delivering projects related to top business objectives.2

80% of organizations agree that team collaboration is critical to successfully planning and delivering projects related to top business objectives.2
